This BearingPoint, Inc. (formerly KPMG) location is a hoteling facility, taking advantage of the realities of the consulting business. Employees do not require permanent space at the home office because they frequently work at client sites. Workspace is provided for two-thirds of the staff and only administrative and support functions are assigned permanent space. The reception desk allows staff to log in to the system for room assignments.

LEO A DALY designed the work floor with a variety of workspace types—all situated in the same place on each floor. All workspace is modular, giving the organization maximum flexibility. The design provides the same type of conference rooms in the same locations on each floor. The client solution center houses technology demonstration and presentation rooms, video conferencing, and training facilities.

The BearingPoint, Inc. space represents the firm's investment in knowledge workers and a sophisticated grasp of how to make efficient use of its space.
